

THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1865.

Letter from Clinton.

Editors Gazette:—"Drawde" thinks I have sold my interest in the machine and am quiet in consequence. He is mistaken. I own the whole thing now, and if we are favored with a good crop this year, intend to make my fortune this fall and "retire." I have in a good looking crop of grain, too, "on shears," which I hope may do something for me. I had a lot of fine plum trees in bloom, but they were visited the other night by countless myriads of what are known as May bugs. They took blossoms, leaves and all, leaving the trees as bare as in December. My half of that crop won't be heavy.

The chinch bug is abroad in the land again, last Monday the air was filled with them. I watched these little pests last year in May, when they were flying, and I conclude they alight upon whatever edible is most promising for their future existence, deposit their egg in the ground at the root of the grain and that generation is powerless for harm. When the next crop (of bugs) comes on, the little red and brown fellows about the size of mustard seed, do the mischief. Now I saw an experiment tried last year which was almost an entire success, which was a repeated rolling of the entire field, packing the earth so closely as to largely interfere with their early growth, but they destroy a field where they originate and then travel; just how to prevent this I do not know, I am of the opinion, however, that if we get plenty of rain and a large growth of straw they will not very materially injure the crops. Last year when grain was about four inches high it stood still in consequence of the drought and waited for the bugs.

A large breadth of grain has been sown, larger fields of corn are being planted and the general impression seems to be among farmers that we shall get an abundant harvest. People feel a renewed confidence in everything. The terrible tragedy struck us dumb with horror, and for days men hardly dared read the news, fearing something equally awful might transpire before the whole plot in all its hellishness, should be revealed. But thank God, the sovereign people have proved themselves equal to any emergency. "Right on," is the watchword, and as the clouds lifted and showed the silver lining, and anon darkened into the acme of blackness and despair, the old ship steered safely and steadily on. The almost universal question was, is Johnson able to wear the mantle which has fallen upon him? But if they ever doubted they never for a moment wavered. One questioned, he is our President and the Government must and shall be maintained in its dignity.

Now that the confederacy is narrowed down into one ordinary sized hoop skirt, we want the old bell weather hung out for conspiracy, or murder, but for a more damning crime than either. Show the world we are not afraid to punish treason as it deserves.

Brigham Young's Early Kissing Experience.

A correspondent of the Auburn Advertiser tells the following story in connection with an old well in Aurelius, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

"As an episode in the history of this remarkable well in Aurelius, it may not be uninteresting to our readers to state that Brigham Young, the apostle of Mormonism, assisted at the well. About this time Brigham took unto himself a wife, by marrying a beautiful and enchanting girl, the daughter of Joseph Work, Esq. Although quite young at the time, yet we remember the great impostor very well, and have not forgotten the numerous scuffles between him and his lady during the hours of intermission at school. Brigham was always attempting to steal a kiss, and she would struggle to deprive him of the delicious pleasure. After a short struggle she would become exhausted, and then her little head, with its rich, wavy hair, would fall back gracefully upon his shoulder, and then we being a bashful little boy—shame closed our eyes, and we only heard sounds resembling the rapid discharge of potato-porging. When the sounds ceased, and we again opened our eyes, we saw a blush of modesty tinged her cheeks, but she returned no word of complaint, and serenely seated her much wronged little self upon the harsh slab bench in the log school house. At that time we thought Brigham, a bold, wicked and cruel man, to take such advantage of a frail, modest little girl. But we have since become a wiser and better man.

A Real Romance of the Harlem.

A young Belgian girl named Cordelier, niece of the proprietress of a well known English shop in Pera, has gone over to the faith of Mecca for love of a seductive young boy. For some months she has been in the habit of going frequently to harems in Stamboul to take and execute millinery orders, and in the course of the business visits appears to have made the acquaintance of the young effendi in question. This was, we believe, entirely unknown to her aunt, who, on her sudden disappearance on Sunday week, remained for several hours in anxious ignorance of her whereabouts.

Late in the evening, however, a note from the fair runaway put an end to her relative's suspense by announcing the step she had taken, and firmly stating her determination to embrace her lover's faith in spite of every opposition. A personal interview on the following day at the Turkish house near the Alhambra, where she had taken sanctuary, failed to shake this resolution, and, accordingly, on Tuesday she went before the cadi and made the first of the necessary declarations which precede formal admission into the pale of Islam. The Belgian Legation then interfered, and after a week the young convert—who is about nineteen years of age, and possesses the buxom personal attractions so dear to the eyes of eastern connoisseurs—was brought before the minister of foreign affairs, in company with the national dragoman. Here, again, she declared her resolute purpose to adore Christianity, in spite of all that either Allah or Pashaler, the dragoman, could do to urge reflection before finally committing herself to so grave a step. In view of this obstinacy, the Belgian authorities now deny her right to make the change, on the ground of nonage, and the Pope temporarily acceding to the objection, her final reception into Islamism is suspended until the receipt from Brussels of specific proof of her age.—Levant Herald.

THE GRAND REVIEW.

Full Details of the Great Event—Immense Crowds—30,000 Troops in Line—St. Louis—The School Children—President of March—Honors to the President, Gen. Grant and Sherman.

WASHINGTON, May 23. A more beautiful day for the purpose of the grand military review could not have been asked than this has been. The recent heavy rains had cooled and purified the atmosphere, and cleansed the streets. The sun shone brilliantly, and throughout the joyous day stood on tiptoe, and all nature was gay and happy. At daylight the streets were already thronged with pedestrians, seeking favorable positions to observe the military pageant.

By eight o'clock every available spot along the route was taken up by the anxious throngs. Windows and house-tops were thronged. Impromptu stands were erected on the sidewalks and in erection of streets. Guards were placed along the outer line of the pavement to prevent any encroachment upon the streets, which from curb to curb were completely occupied by the military procession.

NEAR THE WHITE HOUSE. In the vicinity of the White House, the scene was brilliant and gay in the extreme. Here were assembled upon and near the stand the elite of the country. Upon the wide pavement in front of the Executive Mansion, a large stand was erected for the President, Gen. Grant, members of the Cabinet, distinguished officers of the army and navy, and the Diplomatic Corps. This stand was tastefully draped with flags and handsomely covered with floral devices. On either side of this were two immense stands for the invalid soldiers and distinguished visitors. Opposite this, on the other side of the street, were rows of stands reaching the entire length of Franklin Square, which were occupied by State delegations. All these stands were likewise decorated with flags and banners. About three-fourths of the occupants of all these stands were women, most elegantly attired, presenting a gay and lively appearance.

THE COLUMN. At 25 minutes past 9 o'clock the head of the moving column, led by Gen. Meade, passed by the main stand, but as yet none of the reviewing officers had appeared, and it was nearly 10 o'clock before the President arrived. In a few minutes after Gen. Grant, Gen. Sherman, and members of the Cabinet took their positions by the side of, and around the President. The column of cavalry continued to pass along, each regiment being headed by a full band of music, making melodious the air with continuous and unbroken strains of martial airs, and thus it continued until 20 minutes past 3 o'clock this afternoon.

ENTHUSIASM OF THE SOLDIERS. As the several regiments passed the reviewing officers, the soldiers cheered, and as the various division commanders appeared in the front of the stand, the President, Gen. Grant, and the members of the Cabinet drew aside to their feet. All along the line of march cheer upon cheer greeted the soldiers, the ladies waving their handkerchiefs.

THE SCHOOL CHILDREN. Meanwhile, at an early hour in the morning, the children of the common schools had gathered to the number of 4,000 or 5,000 on the north side of the capital grounds. As the procession passed they sang patriotic songs and presented to the officers bouquets and wreaths of flowers and evergreens.

GEN. CUSTAR'S RAID.

One of the stirring incidents of the day happened just after the President and Gen. Grant had taken their positions upon the stand. The gallant Gen. Custar at this time entered the square at the head of his division upon a magnificent blooded stallion. A lady threw a large wreath to the General, which he caught. His charger took fright, reared, plunged and dashed away with his rider at an almost breakneck speed, running nearly the whole length of the square before Gen. Custar gained control of him. As the horse made his first plunge Gen. Custar's hat flew off and he lost his sword, which, at the moment, was lying loosely in his lap and left arm. He held on to the wreath of flowers with his right hand and waved his horse with the left. The whole affair was witnessed by thousands of spectators, who were enchanted breathlessly by the thrilling event, and, for a time, the perilous position of the brave officer. As he rode back to the head of his column, round upon round of hearty applause greeted him, the reviewing officers joining in it.

EFFECT ON THE REVIEW. The review from the treasury, looking down Pennsylvania avenue to the capital, was among the grandest that ever looked upon, especially when the infantry had fully occupied the avenue and illuminated with flashing steel.

HONORS TO THE PRESIDENT. During the interval between the departure of the 9th corps from the reviewing stand, and the appearance of the 31st corps, the spectators in the vicinity gathered in a large body in front of the President, and called for him. He rose, bowed and sat down. Then there was a universal call for General Grant, and he, too, rose in acknowledgment of the compliment. Then Sherman was called for heartily, but it turned out that he had just left the stand, and there was no opportunity afforded to judge fully the kind of greeting he would have received, but there was every indication that it would have been most cordial.

THE DISTINGUISHED SPECTATORS. In the front row of the reviewing stand, under a canopy of formed flags and banners, sat the President, with Secretary Stanton, General Grant, Attorney General Speed and Secretary McCulloch on his right, and Secretary Wells, Postmaster General Dennison, General Sherman and General Barnard on his left. Without occupying several columns, it would be impossible to give full details of the various military corps, divisions and companies. There appeared in the procession 30,000 troops, comprising what is left here of the Potomac army.

SHERMAN'S ARMY. To-morrow, Gen. Sherman's army, estimated at 117,000, will be reviewed. The city is all alive this evening. Bands of music are passing through the streets, playing patriotic airs, among them "Dixie," and one general carnival of pleasure prevails.

PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEWS. The people will have ample opportunity for obtaining pictures of the scenes of today, as S. M. Peckers of Chicago; Brady, of New York, and Gardner, of this city, took a number of stereoscopic and photographic views. Washington, May 23.—Thousands of persons, including many from other cities, who have specially come hither to see the pageant, line the sidewalk from the Capitol to the Executive Mansion, a distance of a mile and a half, while windows and balconies and all eligible positions, including house-tops, were occupied by deeply interested spectators. All public business was suspended, and there was a general holiday.

AT THE CAPITOL. The Capitol bore the motto in large letters: "The only national debt we can never pay is the debt we owe to the victorious Union soldiers." At the north of the Capitol, at least two thousand school girls were assembled neatly dressed, and there was much pleasant excitement among them in pressing forward to present flowers to the soldiers. The children also sang patriotic songs.

ORDER OF MARCH. The immense column moved in the following order: Headquarters Army of the Potomac, Gen. Meade commanding. General staff headquarters—squadron 1st Mass. cavalry, Capt. Flint commanding—Maj. Gen. Merritt commanding. General staff headquarters—escort 58th U. S. cavalry, Lt. Col. Urban commanding; 3d cavalry, Maj. Gen. Custar commanding.

This officer was vociferously cheered at various points of the line, and was somewhat encumbered by wreaths and bouquets which had been presented him. Other officers were similarly honored, with cheers and floral gifts and the waving of handkerchiefs by ladies.

Next the 2d and 1st cavalry divisions, commanded respectively by Gen. Davies and Gen. Devin; the horse artillery brigade, the Provost Marshal General's brigade and the Engineer brigade. The troops comprising these bodies were composed in a large part from the New York, West Virginia, Vermont, Connecticut, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

Ninth corps, Gen. Parke commanding. The 1st division was commanded by Gen. Wilcox; the 2d division by Brig. Gen. Griffin, and the 3d division by Gen. Carlin. These troops were from Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Rhode Island, New Hampshire Vermont and Maine.

Next followed a division of the 14th army corps, commanded by Brigadier General Dwight, including an artillery brigade, the troops being from Maine, New York, Vermont, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

THE EFFECT. The troops as they moved along Pennsylvania avenue presented a grand appearance, all arms of the service being represented. The occasional insertion of a body of Zouaves served to relieve the sameness and gave a fine effect.

THE FLAGS. Looking up Pennsylvania avenue there was a continuous moving line, as far as the eye could reach of national flags, Division, brigade, regimental and other flags. Some of them were new, and the stars of gold glittering in the sun, and these contrasted strongly with the flags borne in the procession, tattered in battle, or mere shreds. Others were thickly covered with names and dates of battle fields where victories were won by these proud veterans. The flags were decorated with flowers, and very many bouquets hung from the muzzles of muskets.

DRESS. These troops did not as to dress present a war-worn appearance. They were all well and cleanly clad, and their fine marching elicited praise from every tongue.

THE STANDS. On the south side of the avenue fronting the Executive Mansion, a stand was placed, hung handsomely and festooned with national flags. At various points were the inscriptions "Atlanta, Wilderness, Stone River, South Mountain, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Savannah, Richmond, Petersburg, and Cold Harbor." This stand was in part occupied by President Johnson, Members of the Cabinet, Gen. Grant and Sherman, and other distinguished army officers. On the left were members of the Diplomatic Corps and their families, 200 tickets having been issued to this class of spectators.

DISTINGUISHED SPECTATORS. On the stands provided for the purpose were Hon. Geo. Bancroft and the following named Governors of States: Crapo, Buckingham, Anderson, Fenton, Fairbanks, Wade, Sherman, Wilson, Johnson, Chandler, Harris, Hendricks, Dixon, Foster, Morgan, Conness, Lane of Kansas, and Representatives Schenck, Hooper, Mars-ton, Lynch, Hays, Porter, Kelley, Jenckes, Loan, and ex-Speaker Grow. There were at least thirty naval officers, bearing the highest rank, and as many army officers, including Gens. Hancock, Wilcox, Cadwallader, Hitecock, Newton and Rawlins. As corps and divisions passed in review before the President and Gen. Grant, their commanders severally left the column and took seats on the platform. The Judges of the Courts, the chiefs of the Government bureaus, and other public officers, were similarly accommodated.

The crowd in that part of the city was extremely dense, it being the main point of attraction, as the reviewing place, where were assembled the highest dignitaries.

GEN. CUSTAR ON A RAID. Custar rode a powerful horse, restive and at times ungovernable. When near the Treasury Department the animal madly dashed forward to the head of the lines. The General vainly attempted to check his steed, and at the same time, endeavoring to retain the weight of flowers which had been previously placed upon him. In the flight the General lost his hat. He finally conquered his horse and reformed his column. Passing the President's stand, he made a low bow, and was applauded by the multitude.

HONORS TO THE PRESIDENT. Between the rear of the 9th corps and the advance of the 5th corps, there was an interval of ten or fifteen minutes. An immense number of persons rushed into the opening, which was in front of the stand occupied by President Johnson, General Grant and the members of the Cabinet, and gave each other repeated cheers. These gentlemen severally rose and bowed their acknowledgments of the honor.

The troops occupied six hours in the review from nine o'clock in the morning till three in the afternoon. The cadence "March" was taken from the Capitol to Seventeenth street, from which point the various organizations proceeded on the march to their separate quarters. The review is spoken of as the greatest ever to take place on this continent. It was a great affair, and suggestive of the trials and victories of the Army of the Potomac.

Jeff. Davis and his New Situation.

A friend sends us the following for publication, which is said to have been dropped by Jeff. Davis on his journey North: "By the President to the people of the Confederate States of America:

WHEREAS, Certain evil-minded and scurrilous persons in the United States have attempted to bring the sacred cause of Southern independence into disrepute, and to make it ridiculous in the eyes of the civilized world, by uncandid and unseemly comments upon the fact that I was captured by Northern vandals while clad in female apparel,

I, Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, confident in the final success of our cause, and relying upon that unshaken fortitude that never has forsaken me, do proclaim, that I was induced to clothe myself in petticoats out of regard to the zeal of the women of the Confederate States have ever displayed in our holy cause, and had strictly in mind that propriety of conduct that the honor and dignity of my position demanded.

I was inflexibly determined to furnish to the future historian who shall write the history of our time, and the poets of our civilization, material commensurate with the dignity of our cause. I was deeply solicitous that the future artist who should transfer to canvas, or chisel in marble the representation of a scene of such enduring interest to mankind, should have the benefit of draping the principal figure in the historic dignity and grandeur of the Roman toga, or as near an approximation to it as circumstances permitted me to assume. Thus it will be seen that even in the face of our enemies, I held the honor of my country as the first object of my care.

In witness that such motives and such motives alone controlled my conduct, "I appeal to the record of my past life and to that God whose aid and blessing I have so often invoked in behalf of my bleeding country."

ARTEMUS WARD ON THE DRAMA. "A. Ward," has been annoyed by the remarks of ignorant people upon his great show. Many persons declare that his "war figners" are not of a character elevated and refined. He says:

"I maintain that war figners is more elevation than all the plays ever written. Take Shakespeare for instance. People think he is a great thing, but I contend he is quite the reverse to the contrary. What sort of a scene is that to King Lear, who goes round cussing his darters, chawing in ha, and throwin straws at folks, larfin like a silly old koot, and making a ass uv himself generally?"

"There's Mrs. Mobeth—she is a nice kind of woman to hav, ain't she—a puttin old Mac, her husband, up ter slayin Duncan with a cheese nife, while he is payin in a friendly visit to their house. O, he's highly moral, I s'pose, when she larfs wildly and sez, 'gin me the dagger. I'll let his bowels out,' or words to that effect. I say this is all strictly proper i s'pose? That Jack Fawcett is likewise an immoral old cuss, take him how you may; and Hamlet is as crazy as a lute. That's Richard Third—people think he is a great thing, but I look upon him in the life of a monster. He kills everybody he takes a notion to, in cold blood, and then goes to sleep in his tent—Bimby he wakes up and calls for a hose so he can go out and kill sum more people. If he isn't a fit specimen for the galls, than I should like to know where you find him. There's Iago, who is more onery nor I am. See how shameful he treated that highly respected injun gentleman, Mr. Ortherly, making him for to believe his wife was twick with Casheo. Observe how Iago got Casheo as drunk as a bilgewater on corn whiskey, in order to carry out his sneakin designs. See how he works Mr. Ortherly's feelings up so that he goes and makes poor Desdemonny swallow a piller, which cawsed her death. But must stop. At some future time I shall continue my remarks on the drummer, in which I shall sho the vast superiority of war figners, snail, and the fixins, in an intellectual way."

CITY NOTICES. SEWING-MACHINES.—Of the many inventions and improvements of sewing-machines, none have so satisfactorily stood the test of time and service as Grover & Baker's. They have taken the highest premiums at the recent State Fairs of fifteen States; they have, moreover, received the warmest encomiums from all persons who have ever used the machines, and those who have had opportunities to compare the different styles of machines, generally prefer Grover & Baker's to any other. They do the work neatly and well, do not get out of order, and are readily adapted to any kind of sewing. We would advise our lady readers, who are in want of a sewing-machine, to call at Grover and Baker's.—Brooklyn Standard.

THE CULTIVATOR OF CORN.—The large amount of corn to be planted this season, renders it necessary for the producer to have some improved implement for its cultivation. To meet this demand, I am now building "The Badger State" gig corn planter.

After six months experimenting with different models, we have one which we are willing should be put to the test, and that it should stand or fall on its own merits. A lengthy description does not seem to be necessary. We will simply say that we are confident it will perform all that any cultivator will, and all that any farmer will require of it. It has six shovels, or four, as desired. The shovels are so arranged as to cultivate wide or narrow, shallow or deep; and they all have a very easy side motion. To say that they are made under the supervision of G. F. Lane, is a sufficient guarantee that they will be well made. In fact, they will be warranted in every respect.

The Badger State gig cultivator will be sold this season at $50 at the shop.

Call and see it at the shop one block south of the Hyatt House.

BEWARE OF AMBUSHES.

Few people realize the fact that disease lies in ambush everywhere, ready to seize upon the weak. The strong pass through many perils in safety; the weaklings fall by the wayside.

It is amazing that the feeble soldier with all his uncertain steps over the face of the earth in danger every day of falling victims to the morbid influences by which we are all surrounded, when a tested and proven vegetable tonic, capable of endowing them with the vigor they need, is procurable in every city, town, and settlement. It might reasonably be thought that after the twelve years' experience which the world has had of HENRIETTE'S STOMACH BITTERS, all would know that this effect is to prevent disease.

The fact is notorious that a dose of poison will kill a weak one. Now, what is the cause of epidemic diseases? Poison in the air. At this season the atmosphere is surcharged with the seeds of febrile diseases, rheumatism, nervous disorders, bilious complaints, and the like. Persons whose nervous system are relaxed are the first to succumb to these diseases. Brace up the physical energies, then, with this potent vegetable tonic. It is the most powerful purgative which the botanical kingdom has ever yielded to patient research and experiment. Try it! The blindest disciple of the old medical dogma will at last admit that a tonic and alterative, compounded of approved herbs, roots, and barks, can do no harm while the testimony of thousands invite a trial of its virtues.
